“ I have so many memories of my dear friend Joyce. My Visiting Teaching partner and I (before we were divided out of the ward some years ago) had the privilege of meeting with her every month and we had such special visits. She suffered with many severe health problems that were pretty rare, but, I have dealt with some of the very same issues and could relate to her and even share things that had helped me.

I always loved it when Christmas time came because her beautiful tree was full of special ornaments. We enjoyed hearing all the unique stories about how she aquired each one.

I also learned as we visited that she adores pomegranates! Well, I am lucky because my elderly parents, who live in Ivins (by St. George) have a lot of pomegranate trees in their yard. Joyce rarely bought them because they are pricey, so I always brought her some back from my visits to see my folks. She was beyond excited!

I always left her home uplifted and happy. She was such a brave and courageous woman and I learned so much from her example. She adored her children and grandchildren and told us all about them and the fun barbecues they would have in her backyard. We have lost a special, lovely woman and I hope we can learn by her example. With love, Holly Morton
