“ My heart goes out to Lowell and his family. Each and everyone of them has been so supportive of him throughout this unbelievable tragic illness.

He went for help as a young man after an industrial accident. He required a blood transfusion and several surgeries that saved his life. All should have been well, except he contracted a horrible virus during the procedure that sat dormant in his blood and was not diagnosed for 30 plus years.

It's head reared up and struck a good man at his prime. A man who had valued his wife, two young children and grand children. His life revolved around his family and he made sure he took care of them the best way he could.

Hard work and dedication drove this man. He lead so many others to do the same. He lead by example and showed no weakness, no matter the task. He was respected by all who knew him and made his mark as a great man.

He suffered for so long battling a virus that hijacked his life and cut it short for no good reason. Lowell deserves a heroes send off, a true blue collar send off. I will always remember him as my best friend and mentor.... All my love!!

In Solidarity I remain,

“ Well..... I didn't know Lowell personally but my best friend worked with him on and off for years. My buddy doesn't do the "online thing" much, but told me about Lowell's passing and how Lowell "took care of his men". On behalf of all working men, I want to acknowledge him for his dedication.
